introduction

why employer branding matters.

Companies are overpaying on salaries by 10% if they don't have a strong brand.¹

50%

of candidates say they wouldn't work for a company with a bad reputation – even with a pay increase.²

96%

agree that alignment of personal values with a company's culture is a key factor in their satisfaction working there.³

80%

of workforce leaders agree that a strong employer brand has a significant impact on their ability to hire great workforce.⁴ As people work for cultures, not companies, their perception of you as an employer is of paramount importance. Both recruiters and candidates cite company culture as one of the most important determinants in employer choice. Also, if your culture is transparent: candidates actively research the culture of companies to understand if they'll fit. If candidates see positive employee and candidate experiences on review sites, they feel more confident submitting their resume and making a career move.

19%

Only 19% of employees globally perceive a strong alignment between what their employer says about itself and their experience working there.⁵

52%

52% of candidates first seek out the company's website and social media to learn more about an employer.⁶

#1

#1 obstacle to candidates in the application process is not knowing what it's like to work at an organization.⁷

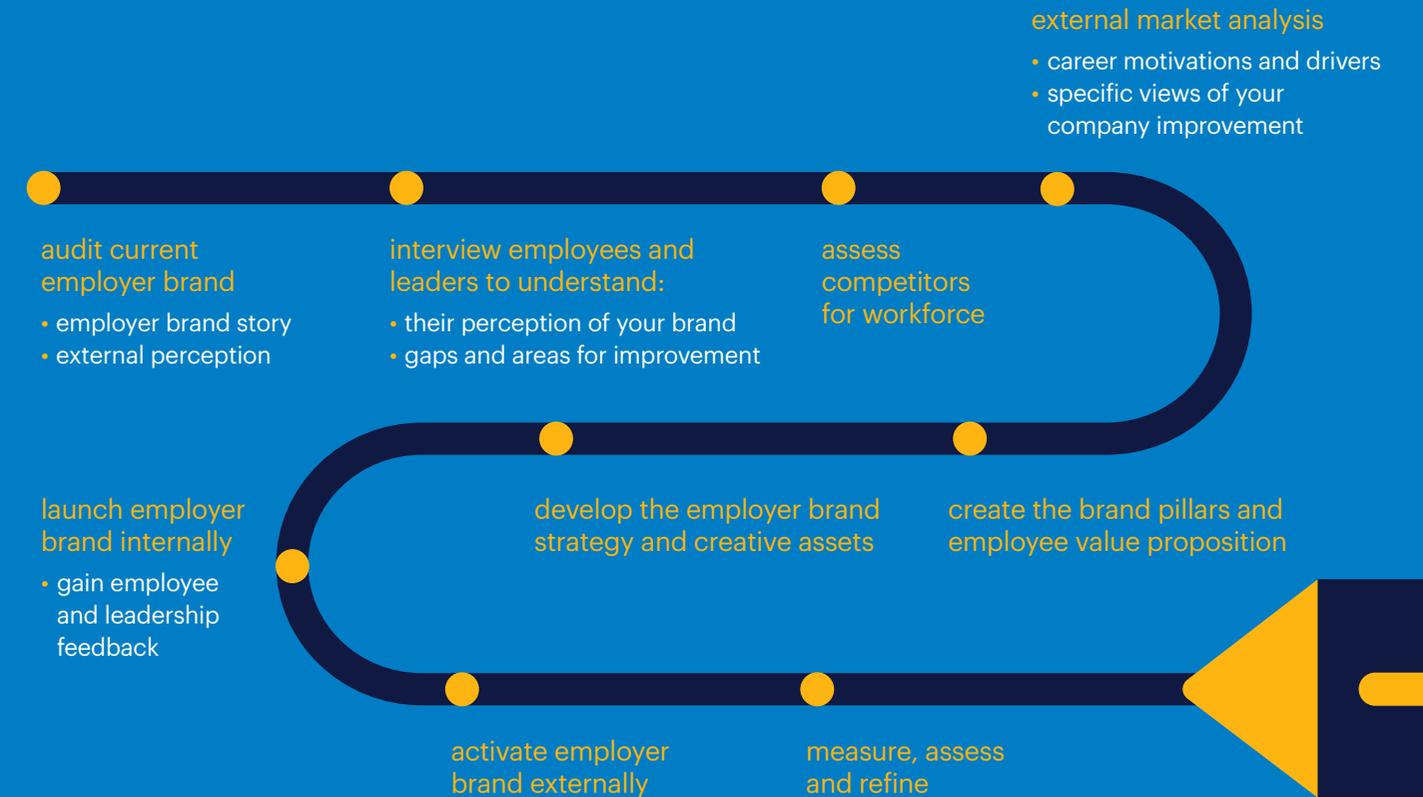

1-2x

Companies with a strong employer brand have a 1-2 x faster time to hire.⁸

76%

Employees who experience a strong alignment between what their employer says about itself and their experience working there are more likely to recommend their employer as a place to work.⁹

key factors for success

The winner of the Randstad Award in each country is based on how appealing the selected company is as a potential employer to the respondents. To determine this, we ask one simple question: Would you like to work for this company? The companies are also evaluated on key factors that have been derived from our 20 years of experience with the Randstad Award. These factors determine the perception of the employer brand.

the key factors (in random order)

- financially healthy
- uses latest technology
- very good reputation
- job security
- career progression
- gives back to society
- interesting job content
- pleasant work atmosphere
- work-life balance
- attractive salary & benefits

unique methodology, unique results

We apply this methodology because a uniform approach makes it easier to draw useful comparisons between countries. This is also why the research is conducted almost simultaneously across all regions. The method is very useful because it significantly contributes to our knowledge about employer branding, and about why people select certain jobs and employers.

The company reports detail the strengths and weaknesses of their external employer brand and provide each company with an excellent industry benchmark. These reports are confidential. The general report (containing the main results per country, including the Randstad Award winner) is made available to the public.
